Newcastle International Airport was originally a wartime civil airport used by the military. The airport saw its first public commercial flight in September 1947 carrying the Duke of Gloucester, a flying boat, on a visit to the city. The airport has gone through multiple name changes, and has been opened to civilian traffic since July 1935. Newcastle International Airport is situated in the area of Newcastle upon Tyne, England, about 6 miles north of the city centre. The airport is owned by seven local authorities: City of Newcastle, City of Sunderland, Durham County Council, Gateshead MBC, North Tyneside MBC, Northumberland County Council and South Tyneside MBC. Copenhagen Airport sold the stake in Newcastle to AMP Capital, which is an Australian based investment company. Current major airlines serving Newcastle International Airport include: Ryanair, Virgin Atlantic, Jet2, Air France, EasyJet, Virgin Trains, Flybe and British Airways. Newcastle International is run by New North East Airport Ltd, (NNEA), under the control of the Airports Commission for England, and the Secretary of State for Transport. Technical and approach information is provided by the AIP. The AIP describes Newcastle as having a displaced threshold cross-ice approach, which means that touchdown is made on the threshold, and the runway to be crossed over by the aircraft's centerline. The ground-based contour marker is located in the east-northeast corner of the length-wise taxiway intersection. The runway lies to the west. The airport is equipped with runway end lights, and can cater for the use of CAT-III equipment. The airport has two aprons, with the main apron located between the terminal building and the ATC control tower. Other facilities include a walk-up car parking operation and an airport hotel. Newcastle Airport is currently served by nine airlines. In 2006, Manchester Airport was announced as the operator of the new Spanish subsidiary of Aer Lingus, which is in turn the majority shareholder of the smaller airline Euskalduna. Newcastle Airport currently has two runways, along with a dual-airstrip operation, as follows; Runway 12L/30R: 9,500 by 150 metres (31,037 ft by 49,141 ft). Runway 12R/30L: 9,500 by 150 metres (31,037 ft by 49,141 ft). Runway 12L/30R is used for take-off c9d1549cdd

Having cleared the fifth gate, the pursuers are forced to regroup in a chamber. Given the rather sparse amount of resources available at this point, players must opt to raise three starting characters in order to be able to establish a defensive line. These characters all have their own unique skills, so each player should aim to raise characters with similar levels and training to suit the needs of their chosen party. The first character on the roster is essentially a starter character, but this does mean that such a character will usually have the strongest offensive abilities and not be as useful in the later stages of the game, due to an overall lack of experience. If a character is under levelled then no experience is gained from battle, but to raise them you will need to obtain level items from the loot bag. Companion Characters The following character classes can all be levelled up with experience. This means that their experience level will be increased whenever they level up, and will not necessarily be increased every time they are leveled. Warriors: The great warrior. These fighters are more suited to killing things. They have more health and quicker attack. Yet they do have less defense and are more fragile than other classes. Artisans: The builder. These characters are meant to provide special support, creating items and defences. They have more health and less defense. However, they are stronger than Warriors. Healers: Those who heal others. These characters are meant to provide defensive support to their allies, and to temporarily increase their allies health. They have less health and defense, but more than Artisans. Merchants: The providers. Merchants are the ones who ensure your safety. They have the most health and defense, as well as the highest amount of starting gold. Their offensive abilities, although useful, are weaker than the other classes. Thaumaturges: The summoners. Thaumaturges have less health and defense than Merchants, and therefore must rely on specialised support. They use their power to summon monsters to fight on their behalf, or provide them with buffs. They have the most health and defense, and the most starting gold. All three of these starter classes have a special ability that they can use to deal more damage to weaker enemies than the Warrior class, which has no unique ability, and the Thaumaturges that have an ability in common with the Warrior class that only deals more damage on hit. Advisors: The advisors come in two varieties: The unique ability, and the third starting character that is unaffected by that
