Ultimate Team Series: This FIFA installment also marks the return of the groundbreaking Ultimate Team Series. Last year's game introduced the UTRP to the series which allows players to create, edit and transfer players from over 1,000 real-life clubs from 17 different leagues, as well as developing and improving them over time to unlock fan-favorite players with unique attributes. The Career Mode returns with career progression available to players that compete in the top leagues. Players can now receive an injury like a broken leg and progress in the game until it is healed. Additionally, players can choose their preferred position from a variety of common categories including striker, midfielder, defender, midfielder, central defender and central midfielder. Players will also be able to share their FIFA experience with a new feature that will have the option to allow players to transfer custom-made items to each other in any FIFA game they purchase. Features in this year's edition of FIFA will be announced in the weeks leading up to the game's release on Sept. 29.

Player Introductions: This year's edition of FIFA introduces the new Player Intro system, which allows players to have their first introduction to their Fifa 22 Serial Key squad played by a real-life professional player. Based on the real-life training sessions of the player, their ability to deliver a strong intro speech and interact with fans and a crowd will determine a player's overall score and will help identify a potential lifelong fan of the player.

 - Passing: Passing from deep is more accurate than ever. Pass as you'd do in real life, such as making a play-action pass or playing a 50/50 into space.
 - Unified Play Position: When the ball is in Possession, players will have unified Play Position. Now, it's more fluent and accurate.
 - Touches Indicator: Now, with the new touch indicator, we've made it easier to judge the intention of the opponent.
- New Content - Champions League:
- Multiplayer - German Bundesliga Bert van Marwijk, coach of the Netherlands National Football Team, shares his insights about the new content.
