By the time he climbed to the apex of Delhi's society, Tejinder Mustafi was an absolute leader with a young family. But Mustafi, 34, came under scrutiny a couple of months ago after he made a U-turn on his stance towards the victim of the 2012 Delhi gang rape that had shaken the city to the core. Earlier in the day, Mustafi had changed his Facebook profile picture and addressed the media in the capital in support of the BJP-led National Democratic Alliance (NDA) government's decision to amend the Criminal Procedure Code in order to fast-track trials in rape cases. But later in the evening, Mustafi had switched sides and decided to back the Congress Party in the wake of the party's decision to support the strike call by the Delhi government to protest the introduction of a women's bill in Parliament. "People who live in cities are used to different kinds of problems. This is the most serious problem India has faced. It's not a problem of one family. It's a bigger problem," he told IANS in an exclusive interview. Mustafi, who owns Mustafi Realty, said he does not regret the stand he took earlier in the day. "I would certainly not have changed my stand on anything. Let me reiterate that if people misused it for political gains or for somebody else's political reasons, then I'm sorry," he said. "Yes, there are certain things that are rotten in this society. But, if this change happens, then our society is headed in the right direction." Mustafi's father-in-law, Pradeep Chaudhary, who is

So the only part that will change is the number in my Path environment variable. From what I can figure out, windows is converting the JPN to (for some reason) Windows-1252. The Windows-1252 documentation says: The first half of the file name is the Windows-1252 name of the character set, followed by the ISO-8859-1 name of the character set, and then the ISO-8859-1 name of the character set again. My problem is, how do I get Windows to think that the JPN is really ISO-8859-1? Unfortunately, I don't have powershell running at the moment, so I'm stuck with VBscript. A: The script below looks like what you are looking for. 'Input file name strFileName = "JpnEnglish.txt" 'Input the desired path variable strPath = "C:\Program Files\Code\Pogreske Data" strFile = WScript. CreateObject("Scripting. FileSystemObject"). OpenTextFile(strPath & strFileName, 2). ReadAll() strFile = Left(strFile, InStr(strFile, vbCrLf) - 1) 'Now create the file object strFile = CreateObject("Scripting. FileSystemObject"). OpenTextFile(strPath & "" & strFileName, 2) strFile. WriteLine vbCrLf & "The file: " & strFileName & vbCrLf 'Now write the converted text back to the file strFile. WriteLine strFile In a letter, the bank told Craig Jackson, the chairman of the Committee of the Regions, that it had failed to comply with a previous demand from the committee that it provide details of which companies borrowed funds from Lloyds during the financial crisis. The regional authority has been ordered to pay £1m in compensation by the committee's liaison officer earlier this year, during which the bank accused the committee of intimidating witnesses. The committee's chief executive, Hugh Robertson, has also received personal threats. Last week, a federal judge in Fresno rejected the Trump administration's request to block a "pre
