Numerous experimental and clinical studies on human gastric ulceration and mucosal glutathione (GSH) metabolism are available. This work was undertaken to find a biochemical parameter in stomach juice to understand the changes in the mucosal defensive barrier during stress-induced gastric ulceration. The serum levels of GSH peroxidase (GSH-PX) were studied in patients with gastric ulcer. In this prospective study, blood samples were collected from 29 patients with gastric ulcer and 15 healthy controls. The levels of GSH-PX were measured using a radial immunodiffusion method. The levels of GSH were measured fluorometrically. The activities of serum alkaline phosphatase, gamma-glutamyl transferase, aspartate aminotransferase and alanine aminotransferase were estimated in both groups. The levels of GSH-PX were significantly elevated in the patients with gastric ulcer. However, the activity of GSH-PX in the serum was higher in the healthy controls. The increase in serum GSH-PX levels may be related to the pathogenesis of gastric ulceration.Q: What is the best way to store multiple user data in to a single row?
