You can now choose between the Ground Battle option or the Head to Head mode. Ground battle mode: Players take charge of up to 16 tanks, artillery or aircraft on each map. Players take the control of the tank's commander, driver, and gunner and navigate the map by ground and air units. They use the artillery system to support tank and infantry units, They move the tanks via the use of the Homing Beacon.Q: Why choose between IList and list in .NET Framework Why don't use just a List in framework?. I mean, why there is IList and List?

A: List is the most generic one. You can add and remove the items and can't be sure that they are of the type Object. IList is more specific. You can't add anything to it and you can't remove an item.

You can add, remove and get a reference to an item. Let's say I have a List. I can do: `Person p1 = list1.First; Person p2 = list1.ElementAt(0); p1.Gender = "F";` But this would not be possible with IList. The reason is to provide flexibility. Now you can change the implementation of the list to use arrays or arrays of lists. For example, you can have a list of People where each Person object also has a Job and you want to be able to remove employees from their job.

What's new:

Monday, April 20, 2011 If you're a family-based business, it seems like the fate of your business is often tied to that of a nearby competitor. And the worst feeling in the world is when you find out that your neighbor started out with new ownership and an uncannily similar business model, saving pennies on things like rent, salaries, and marketing, only to later "discover" ways that yours could be better. Sure, you may have a story about how the new competitors once also had your neighborhood as a customer, but that's all in the past. Now that they're the competition, you want to constantly remind people that they got there as a direct result of your generosity. Now, it all looks different. The window and door frames on the way into and out of the house are newer. The installer's shingle is a different shade of blue than yours. Today's radio show is here to help you avoid that story and the regret that follows it. Today's show is presented by Lea Morrison, who hosts the nationally syndicated show Off the Record, which is devoted to all aspects of Family Business. I also have a few different radio option options for you, including 2 that give you a weekly voice over for Ebay and Facebook, as well as an affiliate opportunity with Old School Media. And, as always, you have the option of re-broadcasting or recording the show online. But first, I want to talk about how your business can learn from the mistakes of a competitor that had the courage to share their mistakes with you. During today's show I'm going to be introducing you to a terrific company by the name of Linden Shades. There are many reasons to try the Linden Shades that you can get on line, and most people don't, as a result. You need to be well versed in best practices for buying stock, buying hardwood, and applying a finish. On top of that, you need to be into furniture, and maybe even have a few extra bucks to spend on furniture. And, oh yeah, you also have to be a bit nosy about your competitors. But before we get into all of that, let me just say that if you've ever bought the type of wood products that Linden Shades sells, you've probably been exposed to the
