To examine the disease symptoms, causative pesticides, treatment and prognosis of acute pesticide intoxications. The data on pesticide poisonings treated during the years 2007-2009 at the Hangzhou First People's Hospital were collected, and the general information, disease symptoms, causative pesticides, treatment and prognosis were reviewed. Of the 8,499 patients, 53.2% were female and 54.4% were younger than 16 years old. The most common causative pesticides were organophosphorus compounds (OPs) and paraquat (21.0%), followed by carbamates (13.6%), organochlorine compounds (OCCs) (8.5%), pyrethroids (6.2%), and fungicides (6.1%). The most common symptoms were gastrointestinal symptoms (37.1%), followed by respiratory symptoms (28.5%) and neurological symptoms (20.0%). Among the patients who were admitted to the hospital within 2 h after exposure, severe respiratory failure was most common (35.2%), followed by mild respiratory failure (21.8%), acute kidney injury (23.0%) and severe hemolysis (22.4%). After administration of specific antidotes, such as atropine, pralidoxime and naloxone, a significant improvement was observed in respiratory and circulatory function. Among the patients with neurological symptoms, the consciousness was improved in the majority of cases (97.9%). Long-term follow-up was available for 259 patients, and the condition of 158 patients (58.8%) was reportedly improved with no sequelae; 130 patients (49.0%) had minor sequelae, and only seven patients (2.6%) had major sequelae. Among the patients, 7.1% received blood transfusion. The most common cause of pesticide intoxications was OPs; however, the majority of patients recovered with no long-term sequelae. Our findings underscore the importance of evaluating OPs in non-occupational injuries. 5ec8ef588b
