Mailbox Madness is returning to ESPN's Top 100 college basketball countdown show starting today. The mailbag is back, which has been a big hit in its two previous rounds. Fans can submit questions via Twitter and Facebook and we'll pick the best of the bunch. I'm taking on your questions for a second round of questions in our mailbag. 1. Utah has dominated the field for the past few years, and winning its ninth straight tournament title wouldn't be surprising at all. But if Utah loses Thursday night to Wisconsin, will that change the mood in the Valley? -- @BrentJohnsonn. Not at all. Utah's fans are used to winning more than winning championships. They want to see a winner. Ask any Utah fan about that success, and they'll say their team's run has been as much of a pleasant surprise as anything. This team has been an absolute force on the glass for much of the season. It's a team that was 15th in defensive efficiency entering the tournament but has improved the glass every time out. Forward Jordan Loveridge, who's already been a problem for some teams in the tournament, has been even more effective in the NCAA tournament. He'll get you to either guard or block every shot you see. If Utah loses on Thursday, I
