Spiritual care has been receiving greater attention in nursing and medicine. However, its impact on medical staff and patients has received little attention. The objective of this study is to summarize the published research evidence regarding the impact of spiritual care on medical staff and patients. Electronic databases (CINAHL, MEDLINE, EMBASE and Web of Science) were searched to identify studies published between 1980 and 2010. The inclusion criteria were: (1) any study type (controlled or uncontrolled), (2) the focus was on spiritual care, (3) research on the impact of spiritual care on medical staff and/or patients were included and (4) the language was English, French or Chinese. A total of 10 studies, all of which were not randomized controlled trials, met the inclusion criteria. The included studies were mainly focused on the following topics: spiritual care in medical staff (n = 3) and on patients (n = 7). The studies revealed that spiritual care may alleviate the emotional burden of patients, help patients cope with their stressors and serve as a buffer for emotional responses in nursing staff. It can also facilitate self-reflection in staff and help them develop a better understanding of the status of patients. The findings of this review indicate that there is a need to conduct further studies on the impact of spiritual care on medical staff and patients, especially on how to balance the needs of patients with the ethical considerations of medical staff.Q: How can I get the most recent data that is inserted in SQL Server using Entity Framework in C#?
