It also has a significant cultural heritage. The city of Milan is the capital of the region. The Alps in the north of the region, the Simplon Pass which leads through the region and some of the largest lakes in Italy form a large proportion of the touristic attractions of this region. Most visitors arriving in the region take in the wonders of Turin and the Riviera di Ponente. Some will visit the island of Ischia in the Bay of Naples. Not far from Venice is Treviso, the largest city in the region, a major centre for wine production and the meeting point of the wine routes of the IATO and the Strada del Vino. But from here you can travel by road, rail or boat to the most popular sights and places on the Italian Riviera. Geography Cape Horn (in the island of Sardinia) in Italy Italy, the longest peninsula in the world About 100 islands off the East coast of Italy - most of which are part of the Tuscan Archipelago. The Vatican City
